Feedback from the July 15 Workshops (And thank you again to all of you who made the extra effort to show up for these workshops) was unavailable at the time this newsletter went to bed Sept. 16. UBC hopes to have that on line before the following workshops below. When asked, Sept. 16, UBC could not tell WBPS the process or format of the workshops. They do think food and beverages will be available but this public comment period is still evolving as to the form it is going to take. Initially, on the website the wording included both open houses and workshops. However, Judy was first told there would be no workshops. But. a new date of Oct. 7 was added and turns out, it will be the only open house and the following dates will be held in workshop formats yet to be determined. Here is the schedule but folks should check with the following website to determine details and to get the text of minutes or results from the July 15 public workshops consultation on land use:
